SINAL EXPLORATION.

PROF. FLINDERS PETRIE'S WORK-

Probasor Petric talls in the preface to his most ricent work bow the short tasky in the Peninsula in the winter, of 1974 5, of who Peninsula in the winter, of 1974 5, of who record, was the fulfillment of a win chemical record, was the fulfillment of a win chemical or twenty-six; years, and the book bears sloquent testimony to the remark that the "sur-priest" were more important than the duty which promipted the mission. The scapitismic man and inscriptions of the Wady Magharol and and inscriptions of the Wady Magazers and the valankle archivological remains of the Wady Peiran, Month Stabal, and the Temple and Mings of Sensibi, have been visited by other travellers, but none has had Profession Patrice advantages of otherstation or his eminent qualifications for pittlining them. The positively hald by Egyptologicals, and the confirmation of not a little that was previously Juntable.

Dynasty, alson ac. 6950;
Around Maghareth and Serabit Professor
Petrie discovered inscriptions relating to thirty-nine Egyptian monarche, down to those of Setnekth (nc. 1268-1262) of the Nineteenth Dynasty, a hundred years subsequent to the Exodus, all of shom appear to have wonshipped Hat-hor, or the 'Mistress of the Turquoise'; Habbor, or the 'Mittens of the Trupcoies', or in o'he work, to have seat uning expeditions to Sinai. The philding of the Temple of the Rengle of the Rengle of the Rengle of these Renalt, which the Professor discovered to have ultimately attained 236f. in length, seems to these Regytian kings. Thanks, however, to a Registal mining company operating in the accient tarquoise mines wast quantities of priceless subplures and inserptions have been igconardly destroyed, and the author is naturally bitter on this vandalium. "Rewylphing," be writen, "gave way to the green for dividends, with the result that hap promoters has their world lost many of its most ancient measurement."

money, the natives lost their tarqueises, and the world dot many of its most ancient menoments."

But the most remarkable portions of this volume lie in the author's dedoutions from his discoveries. There are four foct, or perhaps we should call them theories, which he add 17. That "owners are the most continuous and the same an Serice describes in Sinai' is remarkably example from the dry-actuat style popularly supposed to slog the pene of cleart explorers. The volume is asperbly illustrated by nearly two bunded photographs and four maps. The last four chapters, in one of which the writer definitely decides on Gebel Sarbal as the Mount of the Law, and suggests that the manns of the wilderness was snow, are contributed by Mr. C. T. Correlly who speat two months with Professor Patrick patry, and owing to the obderney of Tarkish soldiers at Akabah ind. Gene by the Nakhi pligram outs, Professor Petrick estimate of the population of the Peninsula probably errs on the side of castion, and possibly does, not include the entire country between the Sare Canal and the Wady of Araba. The following passage, however, will capital, his inclination towards discrediting the number of twenty or twentyfier thousand given by other twarellers. "My wife saked him, when at our camp, if there was a village up the part with a young Belleys who, from the beighter of Serabit, pointed out four black trate in the fareff ralley, and exclaimed with dignity: "Behold the city (Medicah) of the Alogyat—his own tribe. Seeb is promelation in Sinai."

SPECIAL EGYPTIAN SUPPLEMENT.

We must congratulate our London weekly ontemporary "The African World" on the whileation of their that supplement, which is leveted to Egypt, and which reflects infinite rectift on editor, publisher, and printer. The omprehensiveness of its liverary contents and representativeness of its measures and excellent illustrations mike it a volume well orbit of the control of the control of the district of all who control of the control c excellent illustrations make it a volume well worthy of addition to the librarie of all who are interested in Egypt. The limited liability companies of Egypt are dealt with in a concise, and simple manner, which cannot fall to be instructive to financier and layman alike, and several of Egypt's more important commercial interests are referred to in wider detail. Though the majority of articles are devoted to financial and commercial matters, ample space is given to enlyrets of less serious of the continuous cont
